Martine Vallée

Executive Director, Centre de services scolaire de Charlevoix

Martine Vallée has worked in the education sector for over 32 years. She began her career as a high school music teacher. Thanks to her proficiency in her second language, she was also called on to teach English. She gradually developed a keen interest in management, which led her to become a school principal for several years. She was then named director of educational services for the Centre de services scolaire de Charlevoix, where she has now been executive director since 2012.

In addition to bachelor's degrees in music and education from the University of Ottawa, Martine holds a graduate diploma in educational administration and a master's degree in education management from the Université de Sherbrooke.

Martine is particularly interested in the professional development of education stakeholders, the principles of learning organizations, and the learning experience offered to her organization's clientele. She is dedicated to preparing today's youth to not only meet the challenges of the 21st century, but also seek solutions to current issues. She also participates in a partnership group within her local community of Charlevoix that focuses on supporting social development.
